

M'FARLAND-WELSH FIGHT IN ENGLAND

Packey Thinks British Champion
Will Be Easy
Pickings.

New York, January 13.—Packey McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, sailed for England on the steamer Adriatic yesterday for the expressed purpose of meeting Freddie Welsh, the British lightweight champion. McFarland said that the match had not been arranged yet, but that he had received assurances from London that there would be no hitch. The Chicago boxer, who is one of the cleverest of his weight and inches in the ring, was accompanied by his manager, and stated that he might not come back until next fall.

"I can beat Welsh as sure as you're standing there," said Packey to his friends who went to the pier to see him off. "He can't hit hard enough to dent a ball of butter. I fought him twice and know him like a book. The first time was in a ten-round bout at Milwaukee, which I won on points. I knocked him down in the eighth round with a stomach punch, and he yelled 'Murder, Murder.' He said he had been felled, but it was a joke. He wanted to quit. Yes, he cut my eye open in that affair, but it was with the seam of the glove when, after missing an uppercut, he chopped me with the same hand, a blow that should have disqualified him."

"The twenty-five-round draw? Well, I can only say it was my own fault that I did not put him away that time. I dropped him twice, but didn't get under full headway until it was too late. Besides there was something the matter with my eyes near the end of the fight, which Jim Jeffries called a draw. Next day I couldn't read the account of the fight in the newspapers, but I soon learned that one of Welsh's seconds before the fight had put helladonna on Freddie's gloves, and that was what ailed my eyes. But I'm going to square accounts with Welsh in London. I expect to take on several other boys first, so that I can become acclimated and fit. Then I'll go after this alleged champion in earnest. I'll be better than ever at 155 pounds, weighing six or eight hours before the fight, and I'll win sure. Nelson? Oh, he doesn't want to fight anybody that looks dangerous, but he'll and this young Wolgast a pretty tough customer."

Jim Driscoll, England's featherweight champion, who will box twenty rounds with Seaman Hayes at the National Sporting Club on February 15, will leave immediately after that affair for this country to meet all comers, but more particularly Abe Attell. Driscoll wants to fight Attell forty-five rounds, and favors California as the battleground.

Sam Langford will be at the ring side in Philadelphia next Wednesday night to challenge the winner of the six-round bout between Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and Big Al Kaufman. Langford has made final arrangements to sail for Europe on March 1, and will take on Joe Jeannette for twenty rounds in Paris, receiving a guarantee of $2,500 for his end, win, lose or draw.

V. P. I. Defeats Davidson.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Blacksburg, Va., January 13.—Virginia Polytechnic Institute defeated Davidson College at basketball here this afternoon by the score of 68 to 12. The Tarheels were never in it with the Techs, although the latter have only had a week's practice, and the second team was used in the last half.

VIRGINIA TEAM WILL ATTEND INDOOR MEET

Track Squad to Go to Baltimore—Men in Excellent Condition and Expect to Win Laurels for Orange and Blue.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Charlottesville, Va., January 13.—The first indoor meet in which the Virginia track and field team will participate will take place in Baltimore the last week in January, and it looks now as if the Orange and Blue will be in a position to bring back a few laurels from the Monumental City at that time. The last appearance of the Virginia track squad in Baltimore was at Homewood Field, on May 8 last, when, in a dual meet with Johns Hopkins, the Virginians won out by the decisive score of 12 to 32. Virginia won first place in nearly every event except the 220-yard dash and broad jump.

Every day finds the track squad working a little harder than the day previous, and Trainer Lannigan is not losing any time in finding out who is who. There are now sixteen forty and fifty candidates in training, a greater number than in any previous year, and for the past week all have been working together in practicing starts, take-offs and in jogging. The board track behind Madison Hall has been in place for several weeks, and in good weather this takes the place of the indoor track in the Fayerweather gymnasium. Beginning the first of next week the work for the various events will become more specialized, and the squad will be divided into a number of groups.

There are a number of high jumpers to pick from this year, and it looks as if Holladay and the new material will make up for the loss of Archie Randolph and Martin. These new men

BOXING CONTESTS BETWEEN HALVES

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Charlottesville, Va., January 13.—An innovation will be introduced at the basketball game at the University of Virginia Saturday night between the Virginia and Randolph-Macon teams. Between the halves the spectators will be treated to the sight of "Pop" Lannigan's mighty pugilists exchanging uppercuts and body jabs. Forrest Q. Stanton, the whitewind wonder from California, and Lile, the great unknown, will mix it up, and will be followed by the speedy lightweights, Heyward and McClure, who are right there with the goods when it comes to handling the mitts.

Individually the basketball team has been showing up exceptionally well in these events. Captain "Larry" Martin will be sure to sprout bids fair to surpass the record he made as a basketball player at Emory and Henry, and before the season is over will be as good a forward as there is in the South. Cecil's dribbling in the William and Mary contest shows that he is back in his old form. Captain May is again negotiating baskets with the skill that he displayed last year, and is a tower of strength to the team. Ashby, captain of last year's quint, is as speedy as ever and is always able to keep the ball well down the floor.

Ladd is first whip, and Sandy second whip. The pack turns out nine and one-half couples.

RECTOR GOING AGAIN ON THE CINDER PATH

America's Greatest Sprinter Announces He Will Resume Active Training at Once.

New York, January 13.—James A. Rector, credited with being the fastest sprinter in America, has announced his return to the sport that made him famous on both sides of the Atlantic. In a dispatch from St. Louis, where Rector is now studying law, comes word that the great flyer will join the Missouri Athletic Club and begin active training at once.

If he gets in good condition in time, he says he will compete in this city next month at the annual mid-winter games of the Irish-American Athletic Club, which will be held at Madison Square Garden.

Credited with all sorts of records, Rector came out from the University of Virginia shortly before the last Olympic games. While at college he was the fastest man in the South, and report after report was sent broadcast that he was clipping seconds from the old marks. But they were pooh-poohed by the experts.

Before the Olympic tryouts Rector went to Philadelphia and began training under Mike Murray at the University of Pennsylvania. Until then Northern experts had not seen him run, and when he appeared on Franklin Field for a practice sprint during the intercollegiate championships a howl of derision went up from the "wise ones."

"You're as slow as a truck horse," "Why, he's even faster!" "I can beat him myself!" These and many similar remarks were hurled from one expert to another as they stood and watched him romp down the field.

Rector heard some of these remarks, but paid no attention to them. He continued to train, and a few weeks later started the athletic world at the Olympic tryouts. The first smashout he clipped seconds from the record held for years. His great victory then gave him the right to the title of "America's best."

Soon after his return the announcement was made that he had run his last race. In answer to a personal letter from President Roosevelt asking him to again compete against Walker, the announcement was made that the great flyer must quit the game or die in two years. The doctors told him his heart action was weak and that he must cease running. But he has now fully regained his health.

ONLY FAVORITES BRING MONEY HOME

The feature was the fourth, in which Clotteress and Warner Griswell went the entire distance neck and neck, Griswell being able to push his nose in front at the wire. Jacksonville, Fla., January 13.—John Griffin II. hung up a new track record this afternoon when he went five furlongs in fifty-nine and three-fifths seconds. This horse was a real good thing for a few who knew what he could do in a short distance, and his stable is said to have played him heavily. The surprise of the day was in the fifth, when Robin Grey, at 8 to 1, beat the heavily-played two-to-five favorite, Ethon. Summaries:

New York, January 13.—While business was much less active, today's cotton market showed continued excitement, and there was violent fluctuations in prices.

An early decline of from 17 to 23 points which carried May to a new low level for the movement, was followed by an advance of from 20 to 39 points on covering and reports of a better demand from spinners, but a fresh bear raid in the later trading brought out renewed liquidation of stock lots and orders, and just before the close the March option sold at $14.62 and May at $14.74, or 21 to 24 points net lower, and 34 to 40 points, practically 42 per cent below the best prices of the day.

The close was weak without any recovery in prices of the active months, and at a decline of from 10 to 20 points in the general list as compared with yesterday's close.

WORK OF JUDGING POULTRY STARTS

List of Winners at Fourth State Show May Be Announced To-Morrow.

Judges at the fourth annual exhibition of the Virginia Poultry Association began yesterday the work of inspecting the various entries, preparatory to making their awards. The complete list of winners at the show, which is held in the best of the year in this State, will probably be prepared to-morrow, and when the doors open Monday the cages of the prize-winners will be bedecked with ribbons.

Aside from the classes in which ribbons are offered, there are many trophies which are carried away by the victors. It is said that the general interest in the exhibition is more pronounced than ever before.

There are probably 1,500 birds included in the various displays. The Virginia Poultry Association is a member of the American Poultry Association, and members of that organization are here to see that the show meets all requirements.

The various entries are in charge of the exhibitors, as far as the care of fowls is concerned, but the management has arranged that every effort will be made to protect the interests of owners. The pet stock exhibit is one of the features of the show.

Academy of Music—"The Servant in the House."
Bijou—Boutin, matinee and night.
Beautiful and Powerful Play.
An annual event at the Academy of Music last night witnessed one of the most unusual and beautiful plays ever produced—Charles Mann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House." It is called a play, and it is acted in a theatre, but it is really a sermon, lasting about two hours and a half, for the interest actually represented by the terms is not changes of scenery, no effects of lighting or stage setting, and the cast is very small. The play approaches more nearly the descriptions of the old morality plays in spirit than a theatrical performance. In the Passion Play at Oberammergau, the Saviour is actually represented by a man in "The Servant in the House," he is indicated, suggested, brought to mind in the person of a Hindoo servant in the vicarage of the Rev. William Smythe.

The servant, at the end, makes himself known as the vicar's brother, the Bishop of Benares, a wonderful church, not of stone and mortar, but in the hearts and souls of men, but all through the drama he constantly speaks words and does gentle acts that make the audience sit in deepest silence. When "The Servant" is sung, the audience is usually requested not to applaud, when the servant himself, in this play, is on the stage, one could hardly bring himself to applaud.

The Rev. William Smythe, a brilliant scholar and preacher, has become embittered, skeptical, a doubter. His wife, through her desire for place and prestige, has urged him to strive for worldly advantage, and he has yielded, until he has almost starved his soul. His brother, who helped him to obtain an education, has gone down and down until he is "only the man who looks after the drains."

They are both miserable, the vicar because of the realization of his failure in his spiritual life, and the drain-man because of his wretched condition, his revolt against the hopeless tragedy of his life and the loss of his little daughter, who, unknown to him, is living with his brother and his wife. Just at the time the vicar expects his other brother, the Bishop of Benares, the servant appears. There also comes the Bishop of Lancashire, the brother of the vicar's wife, an utterly lawless, mercenary old prelate, an almost impossible character. And the drain-man appears. It is then that the servant begins his work of love, and with his gentle words and loving ministrations all are brought into the love of God and man, save the bishop, and him he casts into outer darkness.

In the hands of an incompetent company, the play would be absurd, if not sacrilegious, but as it was played last night, it was simply a very beautiful drama in the nature of a sermon. Tyrone Power, strong, compelling, with a splendid voice and a perfect stage presence—a great actor I should say.

George W. Wilson did superb character work in the hideous role of the Bishop of Lancashire. Edith Vane was quite satisfactory as the vicar's wife, and David Glassford was most excellent as the vicar, Jessie Giddings was attractive and appealing as the drain-man's daughter, though her voice gave a little monotonous, and Harold de Backer was more than good in the small part of the page boy, Wilfred Roger, the servant in the house, had a most difficult and trying part, which he played with deep feeling, apparently reverentially and with a sad undertone. His voice is low and soft, and his gestures were few and quiet.

The whole performance is a pleasure to those who care for artistic work on the stage, and not to be priggish, it is of the kind that must help.
